Proposals for service change in Cambridge

THE NATURE OF POLICING AND CRIME IN CAMBRIDGESHIRE IS CHANGING.

Our population is growing, and our current police facilities don't allow us to fully respond to today's needs.

Cambridgeshire Constabulary is consulting on proposals to enhance our service for the south of Cambridgeshire by replacing our outdated facilities at Parkside Police Station with both a new city centre police station and a police hub on the outskirts of Cambridge. Details of a final site for both the city centre police station and the hub will be subject to the outcome of this consultation.

WHY WE WANT TO CHANGE OUR SERVICE

Our current facilities at Parkside do not allow us to fully respond to the changing nature of crime, including complex and online crime. We also cannot expand our facilities at the current station beyond their existing capacity.

The proposals for a new city centre police station and a police hub on the outskirts of Cambridge to serve the south of Cambridgeshire will provide a number of benefits:

More time for police officers to be on patrol by increasing the number of cells and reducing detainee travel time

Be able to respond to complex and online crimes more effectively

Improve the speed of the court appearance process through the increased use of virtual courts

Ensure a public-facing location in the city centre

Respond to the increasing demand for police as the population grows

These new facilities are needed to improve our response and service to you. Without them tackling crime will become more difficult.
